News of General Interest From the Six States

Two men dropped dead while marching in a Republican torchlight parade and rally in Boston.

While hunting in the woods, near Bristol, R. I., with five companions, Philip Blabano, 13, was instantly killed by the discharge of a shotgun in the hands of Joseph Ferri. Ferri was arrested on a charge of manslaughter and pleaded not guilty when arraigned.

Robert Sankey, Jr., 10, Bradford, R. I., was instantly killed, when according to the police, he was struck by a pistol bullet, fired at a target by Nathaniel Tinkler, a neighbor. The boy, who was playing with a dog, suddenly ran directly between Tinkler and the target.

The sum of $12,318 in scholarships and tuition loans was divided among 718 undergraduate students at Yale in 1923-24, according to the report. Compared with the sum of $52,125, which was divided for the same purpose among 297 students in 1918-19, the average aid per student has increased from $175.50 to $225.70.

H. Harold Gilpatrick, former state treasurer and cashier of the First National bank of Putnam, Ct., is to be taken to Atlanta federal penitentiary to serve 15 years imposed in the United States court by Judge S. Thomas, following pleas of guilty or nolo to 25 counts of embezzlement of funds totalling $353,000 of the bank funds.

Plans are being considered by the Hartford, Ct., school committee for the installation of a chlorine chamber for the treatment of colds contracted by children and teachers. Chlorine gas was used in Washington with success in treating President Coolidge for a cold. Treatment will be voluntary and written consent from parents will be necessary.

Robert A. Hacker, 8-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hacker, East Bridgewater, Mass., was found by his mother smothered to death in his carriage. The child was in a sleeping bag in a carriage and it is believed that the wind blew the hood of the sleeping bag over the child in such a manner that the child was smothered.

The Stockbridge (Mass.) tax collector has advertised for sale for non-payment of taxes the Stockbridge properties of Molly Covington Hanna, whose unpaid 1924 assessment is $4,252, and of Mary R. Mayer, whose unpaid assessment this year is $3,376. Mrs. Hanna is the divorced widow of Dan R. Hanna, wealthy Cleveland publisher, and Mrs. Mayer is the wife of Charles W. Mayer, one-time steamship magnate of New York.

Former Representative Charles H. Morrill of Haverhill filed a bill with the clerk of the House under which the state would borrow $500,000, the proceeds to be used in providing work for the unemployed. The bill calls for the reopening of the closed industrial plants for the purpose of making goods needed in the running of state institutions. The money would also be expended in the construction of roads, the reclaiming of waste land and the development of forests.

Judge Hammond in the superior court at Boston has authorized John B. Bolton of Philadelphia to increase the amount of his suit against John Manning Van Housen of Jamaica Plain, exploiter of the soft collar, from $309,000 to $6,000,000. In an amendment to the suit, Bolton says that Van Housen has made more than $15,000,000 out of his soft collar. He asserts that he invented the collar and that Van Housen agreed in 1912, if he would assign his patents to him, to put the collar on the market and to pay him 50 percent of the profits. Bolton says he has been paid nothing and that Van Housen owes him $15,000,000.

Comparative data on the development of self-support activities and scholarship aid at Yale University since the war, strikingly illustrates the increased demands now being made upon the university by students seeking to work their way. Last year 1502 student employment applicants were registered, as compared with 604 in 1918-19, an increase of approximately 250 percent. To meet demands, the university has through its Bureau of Appointments, expanded the amount of term-time and summer employment from $36,628 in 1918-19 to $257,722 last year, an increase of 432 percent. Undergraduate scholarship aid during the same period has increased 495 percent.

Alfred Norman, Attorney of Oakland, Me., was killed when the hammer of his 12-gauge shotgun, which he was hitting out of a rowlock, was caught on a seat. The charge passed through his heart.

A mixing hut at the National Fireworks Company plant exploded injuring one workman, Edgar Knight. He was mixing a preparation to be used in case fireworks, when, without warning, it exploded and he was blown bodily out of a door and the building was badly damaged. Knight escaped with severe burns.

BOSTON MARKET REVIEW

Prepared by the Boston Office of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture

Week Ending November 8, 1924

DAIRY AND COUNTRY PRODUCTS: Butter—The market has been dull throughout the week. Demand, especially for fresh butter, was very light and although receipts have shown considerable decrease a tendency for some accumulation was noted. There was some demand for storage butter at 25c. The market still is in an unsettled condition and market sentiment continuing its earlier tone. At the close prices were 22 score 25c, 20-21 score 23-24c, 18-19 score 24-25c, 16-17 score 25-26c. Eggs—Market quiet on all grades except the lightest quality fresh. Receipts of the latter were light and with demand fair supplies quickly cleaned up. Medium and lower grades of fresh eggs in limited demand and closed easier at unchanged prices. Refrigerator eggs trading together with advance of sharp decline at other markets, and at the time prices were distinctly unsettled. Most of the week Western Extras 50c, extra large 52-55c, extra 48-50c, nearby 45-48c. First 41c, all browns up to 35-40c. Dresser 35-40c. A farewell reception was planned by Annapolis Lodge, I. O. O. F., Wednesday evening for Rev. F. M. Lamb. Owing to a severe cold he was not able to be present and 25 brothers went to his home to bid him good bye, and presented him with a solid gold watch chain with a beautiful charm attached, bearing the emblems of the Odd Fellows and Canton Encampment, and his initials engraved thereon. The presentation speech in behalf of the subordinate lodge and Encampment was made by B. E. Patterson. Mr. Lamb was taken by surprise, but feelingly thanked the brothers, and spoke of his pleasant associations with them during his residence here and of his regret at leaving town. Mr. Lamb has held the office of Chaplain in the subordinate lodge for some time, and will be greatly missed in the orders, where he has been of much help. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb left for their new home in Mechanic Falls, Tuesday.

Mrs. Anna Jones of Hartford passed away Tuesday at her home at the age of 87 years. She was born in Turner, Dec. 4, 1836, the daughter of the late Joseph and Johanna Bryant Allen. She married Lewis C. Jones, and they have lived for the last 40 years in Hartford. She leaves one son, Leonard, who lives at home and three daughters, Mrs. Minnie Briggs of E. Auburn, Mrs. Clara Tobin of Turner and Mrs. Mary Hutchins, who has been with her the past few years, and grandchildren and great grandchildren. The funeral was held at the home Thursday, Rev. Charles Whyant of Livermore officiating. There were many beautiful flowers, and the interment was at Turner.

At the track meet at Canton, Saturday, the Canton barriers won from Lion Falls, score 25 to 32.

Schools were closed Monday and Tuesday of this week, opening Wednesday in the new school building.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Newman of Auburn and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Towle and son of Dixfield were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lucas.

E. L. Disher, E. K. Hollis, Ansel Ellis and Chas. Small are at work on the rug factory at Turner. H. T. Tirrell is contractor.

Mrs. Mary E. Coburn is employed at Weld.

Lay Poison for Borers in Fall

Most Serious Pest of Trees and Must Be Combated to Get Good Fruit.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Throughout much of the peach-growing district east of the Rocky mountains from Canada to Florida, orchardists are troubled with the damaging work of the peach borer, the most important and serious pest of these trees and one that must be combated relentlessly if the peach is to be grown. Its injuries each year, including the cost of control measures, amount probably to not less than $5,000,000, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

This pest has been known for more than 150 years, is a native American insect, and has demanded the attention of horticultural men continuously. Many methods have been tried for its eradication and control, but not until 1915, when the bureau of entomology began experiments in the use of various toxic gases as a possible means of control, was any very practical method found.

Use Parathionchloride. In these experiments it was found that the chemical parathionchloride, for which the abbreviated name "parathion" is suggested when referred to as an insecticide, could be used successfully in control of the insect. This chemical is a white crystalline substance having an ethereal odor which, while harmless to persons and domestic animals under ordinary conditions, is poisonous to insects.

Application of this chemical to peach trees for the control of the peach borer should be made in the fall after most of the leaves have fallen and their sap-sucking activities, to avoid late defoliation of the trees. The chemical should be applied to the base of the tree in a circular band as far as two feet from the trunk and the lower part of the trunk is about two inches from the tree trunk. As soon as the chemical has been applied, cover it carefully with several shovels of dirt, scattering a cone-shaped mound around the tree trunk by pouring the earth with the back of the shovel.

Remove Dirt Mounds. Under average fall weather conditions most of the chemical under the dirt mounds will have evaporated in four to six weeks, killing from 50 to 100 per cent of the borers. It is a good practice to remove the mounds of dirt some five or six weeks after application of the chemical.

The "parathion" in the experience of the bureau of entomology, can be used without danger of injury on trees four years of age and over—the dose on four and six year trees being three-fourths of an ounce per tree, on trees six years of age and older one ounce per tree, so if the trees are unusually large one and one-quarter ounces may be used.

Make Stack Silage When No Silo Is Available

Andrew Ross, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station, says that farmers without silos can preserve green and succulent corn by the stack method of making silage.

C. L. McElroy, a Minnesota county agent, has made stack silage for four seasons on his farm at McIntosh, Minn., and recommends it in preference to baled silage. He makes the stack about 20 feet in diameter and 20 feet high, keeping the center lower than the outside until the top is reached when it should be filled full. The bales must be distributed evenly over the surface with the butt ends to the outside.

During the winter the top of the stack is kept covered with a foot or two of well hay which can be drawn back as the stack is taken off. In order to prevent extreme freezing the covering should be replaced after the first frost has been broken down.

Corn preserved in this way will not be so much affected by frost on the outside of the stack, but as the ends of the stack are exposed the corn is not so much affected. According to McIntosh and McElroy the stack silage is somewhat better than the baled silage in that it is more palatable and it is a good silage for the winter and it is also good for the spring and summer.

Improve Marketing Plans

When farmers collected together to discuss their marketing plans, the results were often disappointing. The number of farmers who attended the meetings was small and the results were often disappointing. The number of farmers who attended the meetings was small and the results were often disappointing.

Dress Turkeys for Market

There are four ways to dress a turkey, and the most common is the old-fashioned way. The turkey is first plucked and then the skin is pulled back. The turkey is then dressed in one of four ways: the old-fashioned way, the new way, the quick way, or the easy way.

over unimproved or common see you been enrolled in the improvement project?

LIME PROJECT

This project has interested people this year than ever before, they have learned the value of increasing the yield of hay, seven men are carrying lime demonstrations in the county and are proving themselves that lime pays on the farm. The number of men the demonstrators using lime. The total amount of lime used, and I am positive that more used lime as the result of neighbors than the above. Our vineyard relative to the use of lime showed that the lasting effect is more than one year from the time of use. Were you one of them?

One hundred and seven men took part in this project this year. 15 1/2 tons of nitrate of soda, 10 tons of acid phosphate. Approximately 325 acres being top dressed and log good profits to the one who has some splendid increases in yield in using it.

COW-TEST ASSOCIATION

Twenty-one farmers in one section of the county have taken advantage of this work and have benefited from it. Many, among them being Jacobson, East Waterford, that it has meant dollars in their pockets in the saving of time, fuel, belonging to the association. Every man knows just what each cow is worth and if found unprofitable disposed of. Before going into operation these men in part for their cows were returning a profit. Actual tests proved differently. It worked out the same with those who had not belonged to such an organization.

FARM MANAGEMENT

Seventy-eight farmers in the section keeping farm accounts and how to stop leaks in their business many other things that help to farming more profitable. Thirty farmers have kept accurate accounts.

Twenty-four have kept pot accounts and 25 poultry accounts have benefited in some way and in cases in more than one way in these accounts.

POULTRY PROJECT

Thirteen farmers estimating operations will be held in this section each week. One man is going to learn to estimate the value of wood growing on his lot. Many of these have been held with good results and those attending have been favorably impressed with the results that many purchased the results at once. Did you attend one of these demonstrations? We hope you did.

ORCHARD PROJECT

Seventeen men are carrying out fertility demonstrations to determine for themselves whether it pays, number in addition to the 27 of state of soda amounts to 121. Total amount of nitrate used in this that we have a record of is 67 1/2 tons. This means that approximately 1000 trees in the county were fertilized year the net profits derived from project alone was $25,000, were on this project.

Eight hundred and seventy-nine were purchased through the county planting plan, at a remarkably low price. Many men saving enough on these to pay their Farm Bureau dues for several years.

POULTRY

Twenty selecting breeders' demonstrations are being conducted in the county, most of which have been as a result of these demonstrations. As a result of these demonstrations, many men are saving enough on these to pay their Farm Bureau dues for several years.

MISCELLANEOUS

Twenty-three men received instruction in setting out pine nursery. Twenty-one men received instruction in ditch blowing.

Twenty-one men received instruction in grafting.

Seventeen men received instruction in pruning.

1700 root grafts were planted.

100 bushels of N. Y. mammoth eggs were used this year.

There are many other ways in which farmers have been benefited during the year but the above are some of the accomplishments.

calm, upon the man with whom he chanced to be speaking.

The grand, stately room was lost to Tommy's eyes; Lee had passed beyond the clump of wild lilacs whose glinting, heart-shaped leaves screened the open court about which the ranch-house was built. A strangely elaborate ranch-house, this one, set here so far apart from the world of rich residences. There was a score of rooms in the great, one-story, rambling edifice of rudely squared timbers set in field-stone and cement, rooms now closed and locked; there were flower-gardens still cultivated daily by Jose, the half-breed; a pretty court with a fountain and many roses, cut upon which a dozen doorways looked; wide verandas with glimpses beyond of fireplaces and long expanses of polished floors. For, until recently, this had been not only the headquarters of Blue Lake ranch, but the home as well of the chief of its several owners. Luke Sanford, whose name alone had been in the mine at forty-five, a man who reckoned with had followed his fancy here extensively and expensively, allowing himself this one luxury of his many lean, hard years. Then, six months ago, just as his ambitions were stepping to flitting heights, just as his hands were flitting with newer, greater endeavor, there had come the mishap in the mountains and Sanford's tragic death.

Lee passed silently through the courtyard and came to the door at the far end. The door stood open; within was the office of Bayne Trevores, general manager. Lee entered, and his hat still far back upon his head, the sound of his boots upon the bare floor caused Trevores to look up and hard. His eyes were the glinting gray eyes of a man who is forceful, dynamic, the sort of man who is a better captain than lieutenant, whose hands are strong to grasp life by the throat and demand that he stand and deliver. Only because of his wide and successful experience, of his initiative, of his way of quick, decisive action, he came to a marked executive ability. He had Luke Sanford chosen Bayne as his right-hand man in the colossal venture as the Blue Lake ranch. Only because of the same pushing, vigorous personality was he

In a moment Trevors lifted his frowning eyes from the table, turning in his chair to confront Lee, who stood lounging in leisurely manner against the door-jamb.

"That young idiot wants money again," he growled, his voice as sharp and quick as his eyes. "As if I didn't have enough to contend with already."

"Meaning young Hampton, I take it?" said Lee quietly.

Trevors nodded savagely.

"Telegram. Caught it over the line the last thing last night. We'll have to sell some horses this time, Lee."

Lee's eyes narrowed imperceptibly. "I didn't plan to do any selling for six months yet," he said, not in explanation but merely in explanation.

"They're not really."

"How many three-year-olds have you got in your string down in the big meadow?" asked Trevors crisply.

"Counting those eleven Red Duke colts."
